A TROUBLING TREND
Help Us Finish the Education and Activity Center in 2012

We’re so close, thanks to God and our many friends who have made donations to the Education and Activity Center at Navajo Ministries. As of late 2011, we were just about $250,000 away from completing this wonderful new facility, which will include new classroom space for the On-Site School, a small library, a games and activity area, a central kitchen and cafeteria, and more.

Will you please consider a gift in 2012 to help us finish this much-needed facility? The current school is housed in a 50-year-old building, right next to a busy four-lane highway. It is old, outdated and in need of being replaced. Help us realize the dream this year!

To make a financial gift to this amazing project, please use the envelope located in the center of this magazine. Simply write “Education and Activity Center” on the inside of the envelope, and you will be helping move this project closer to completion.

More information on the overall Navajo Heritage Center project is available at www.NavajoHeritageCenter.org, or by contacting Director of Development Eric Fisher at 505.324.5260 or Fisher@NavajoMinistries.org.

ABOUT NAVAJO MINISTRIES
Navajo Ministries was established in 1953 for the purpose of caring for dependent children, regardless of race, religion or national origin, and for printing and distributing Navajo tracts and hymnals.

The ministry has expanded over the years to include: a non-commercial Christian radio station, KNMI Vertical Radio 88.9 FM; an On-Site School; Counseling Center; Navajo Nation Outreach, providing spiritual, emotional and material encouragement to those living in Navajoland.

When a donor expresses a preference as to the use of donated funds, Navajo Ministries will make every effort to honor their request and in most cases this is done in exact compliance with the donor’s wishes. However, the Board of Directors, in ensuring that Navajo Ministries carries out its exempt purposes required by law and effectively uses available funds, accepts the responsibility of applying funds in accordance with objectives of the ministry.

Views and opinions expressed in Navajo Neighbors by those interviewed are not necessarily those of Navajo Ministries.

Navajo Ministries is a Charter Member in good standing with ECFA (Evangelical Council for Financial Accountability).

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR
Dear Readers,

Welcome to the latest edition of Navajo Neighbors, a magazine that highlights the great work God is doing through Navajo Ministries. It is also a privilege for us to share stories of Navajo people who are helping to make a difference in their communities.

The Winter 2012 issue features a cover story on Nina Benally. Nina has a memorable history with Navajo Ministries, first serving as an assistant houseparent and later as the Navajo Education Coordinator at the Navajo Ministries School. A strong Christian, today Nina has returned to college, at the young-at-heart age of 60. You can read her amazing story beginning on page 6.

Other stories in this issue include:
- President Jim Baker takes you on a trip to the east coast to give an update on a speaking trip he and Kay Baker, along with Joe and Gerri Begay, took this past fall.
- The Four Corners Home for Children welcomes new Director of Children and Family Services Kelly Hargrove.
- Pat Moone returns to Navajo Ministries to help teach at the On-Site School.
- Counselors Bill and Linda Eubank bring to light a troubling new trend — technology stress.

There’s also much more inside the pages that follow. The entire staff at Navajo Ministries hopes you enjoy reading the Winter 2012 issue of Navajo Neighbors.

God Bless,

Eric Fisher
Editor and Director of Development
Joe and Gerri Begay and Kay and I were able to enjoy a couple of weeks on the east coast last fall as we presented Navajo Ministries at several church services, pot luck meetings and banquets. During those days we traveled nearly 3,000 miles, covering eight states that included Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, Virginia and our home state of Pennsylvania.

North and South Carolina, Virginia and our home state of Pennsylvania.

We were able to connect with some long-time church supporters, including Calvary Bible Fellowship and First United Methodist Church in New Jersey that have been supporting the ministries here for many decades. At the Methodist church, a group of girls sang “Jesus Loves Me” in Navajo. Kay and Gerri even dressed one of the girls in a traditional Navajo outfit.

A couple of new churches in Charleston, West Virginia (Randolph Street Baptist Church) and Fletcher, North Carolina (Feed and Seed) provided us with an opportunity to share with new friends. Some of our friends who once lived in Farmington are part of the Feed and Seed fellowship. It was once an old feed store with rustic wooden floors and a varied assortment of seating arrangements, including three rows of theatre-type seats taken from the Grand Ole’ Opry. We provided an evening of “Navajoland ... Up Close and Personal.”

We paused from our travels in Charlotte, North Carolina for a visit to the Billy Graham Library and Museum. What a peaceful blessing it was for us to view the exhibits and displays that presented the wonderful ministry of Billy Graham. Another highlight was getting to visit with one of our former Ministry children, Cassie, and her adorable baby, Aubrie. Cassie’s sister, Sonya, is a housemom in our House of Hope and brother John is serving in the Marines in Japan.

We finished up our trip with two banquets in Lancaster County, our homeland. Our luncheon and dinner meals were held at a banquet hall called The Gathering Place. What an appropriate name for a place to meet with our friends and supporters. Another one of our former “Ministry kids,” Sandy, was able to join us that night, too. Some of these friends grew up with us and have been so faithful with their support over these many years. Our home church, First Church of God in Lancaster, has consistently supported us every month since we came here in 1975!

It’s always a joy to spend time with our friends in various parts of our country. If you would like us to include your church in a future trip, please let me know. I want to thank all of our loyal friends who pray for and support us on a regular basis. You are a gift from God.

Bi-Fly Fishing Event Raises Needed Funds

The annual San Juan River Bi-Fly Fishing Tournament, held last August, was another big success, raising more than $40,000 toward the operational expenses at the Four Corners Home for Children.

Thanks to all of the anglers, guides, sponsors and supporters of this wonderful fund-raising event. Now, we’re looking forward to the 19th annual Bi-Fly event, scheduled for August 17-18, 2012. This will be a special year for the fishing tournament, which has been designated as an official New Mexico Centennial Event, celebrating the state’s 100th birthday during all of 2012.

We are now in the process of accepting four-person teams for this year’s Bi-Fly Tournament. For more information on how you can get involved in one of the premier trout fishing events in the nation, see the bottom of page 2 in this magazine.

Local Rotary Club Donates Swing Sets

The San Juan Rotary Club helped purchase and install two new sturdy swing sets near the future Education and Activity Center at Navajo Ministries. Some of the children who live on grounds are pictured last fall enjoying the new swings. A big thank you goes out to the San Juan Rotary Club for helping to make this possible.

School Students Get Special Visitor

Jared Okello, of Kenya, and Ronna Jordan, President and Founder of the National Day of Care, visited the Navajo Ministries School in November to share information about Africa with the elementary students.

The students learned about Kenyan culture and food from Jared, and even were able to learn a couple of African language words. Jared and Ronna, who lives in Farmington, were teaming to offer information about the need to assist orphans in Africa. This year’s National Day of Care, which sets aside one day to encourage involvement to help children in Africa, is February 12, 2012. For more information, go to www.nationaldayofcare.org.

Former Ministry Children Marry at Navajo Ministries

Matthew Drake and Nasheena Lee, who met as children at Navajo Ministries, were married at the beautiful gazebo area at the ministry campus on September 28th. Rev. John Greydanus performed the ceremony in front of family and staff members. Matthew and Nasheena desired to be married where they first met, and developed a friendship that would later lead to marriage. Congratulations to the new married couple!

Friends, Family Say Farewell to John

Staff members and family gathered in early September to wish John Livingston farewell as he headed to Japan for two years as part of the U.S. Marine Corps. John was raised from a small child to his senior year of high school at the Four Corners Home for Children at Navajo Ministries. We will miss John and are very proud of him!

something very good.

It wasn’t until years later, following a divorce and other personal struggles, that Nina Benally truly discovered that Jesus Christ could change her life for the better. She became a Christian on a December day in 1983 and, while she says there have been a few “bumps and bruises” along the way, she can’t imagine a life without Jesus.

“He’s there for me every day. Life is no fun without Him,” Nina said. “There was a period of time when I stepped back and was so angry and frustrated with God. But, I couldn’t live without Him, and I came back crying. His arms are always open.”

Nina Benally has lived a full life, and has seen many beautiful parts of the country and world. Along with living in the Four Corners region, she spent time in Alaska, Phoenix, Salt Lake City and the state of Washington. She also was part of a cultural exchange trip to New Zealand several years ago.

Now, at the young-at-heart age of 60, she’s back in school at San Juan College in Farmington, pursuing an associate’s degree in horticulture studies. She wants to apply what she learned many years ago on the family farm and ranch and take it back home to her Navajo chapter in Hogback, New Mexico. She’s also a pretty good student. Her grade point average last semester was a perfect 4.0.

“My grandkids are amazed I’m back in school. I’m really having fun,” she said. “I do get exhausted. I get up at 4 in the morning for devotion time and exercise. Then, I get ready for a full day of classes.”
Hard work, though, has never been a problem for Nina Benally.

Nina, who grew up with five brothers and five sisters, learned how to live off the land through the lessons taught by her mother and father, Louise and Dan Benally.

“I started herding sheep with my mom at 2 years of age. We had chores all of the time. By age 7, I was responsible for 45 to 70 head of sheep, along with the dogs,” she said. “My parents taught me to be responsible. It was always a very long day, but our family was very close. We worked during the day, and at night we would spend time as a family. That’s the time my father would counsel us and take time to learn about what we were going through.”

Nina spent several years as the Navajo Education Coordinator at the Navajo Ministries On-Site School before going back to college. Her many years on the family ranch served as a perfect training ground to help teach elementary students about their language and culture.

“I hated to leave the kids, but I wanted to pursue my education,” she said. “When I taught at Navajo Ministries, I taught the students everything my mom and dad taught me. I taught the children how to weave and how to structure a loom from the beginning. We spent time learning how to recognize and start a design. There’s a lot of math in weaving a rug, so it fit right in with their studies.”

Along with teaching students how to make a Navajo weaving, Nina taught students about Navajo history and culture, including teaching them a variety of Navajo words and songs. One year the class even got to visit near Nina’s family ranch to learn about crops and living off what was readily available, even in the high desert.

Navajo Ministries President Jim Baker said Nina was truly an important asset to the organization during her time with the Ministry.

“It was a real joy to have Nina on staff with us. Prior to working in our school, she served as an assistant houseparent. She was ‘grandma’ to all the kids. They loved hearing her stories from when she was a little child living out in the Navajo Nation. She was a great team player, working well with all of the staff. We all learned valuable lessons from her about the Navajo culture and lifestyle,” he said.

As Nina looks back on her life, she always remembers one wonderful date – December 22nd, 1983. It was the day she gave her life to God. She now can’t imagine a life without Him.

An Angel Comes Calling

Both of Nina’s parents are no longer living – her father passed away in 1978, and her mother died in 2003. She owes much to her parents, who always provided a loving, stable home environment. “They were everything to me,” she recalls.

However, there was always another person right by her side – someone she also calls “mom,” Naomi Andrews. Andrews, a former educator, first met Nina when she was a 12-year-old, seventh-grade student in Shiprock.

“We first met when I was in school, and from then on we stayed in contact. She’s the one who led me to the Lord. She had heard I had gotten a divorce in the early 1980s, and she came looking for me. When Mrs. Andrews found me, I was really hurt and I had practically given up. I was really mourning,” Nina said. “My daughter, Vickie, was only 3 then, and we were having a tough time.”

Naomi Andrews knew exactly where Nina could get help and took her to a Christian church on the north side of Farmington.

“I had always wondered who made the plants, the water, the snow, and even the black clouds in the air. How come the trees were bigger than the bushes? Growing up, I had so many questions. Who was Jesus? Naomi would talk to me about God, but I didn’t really understand until that day in December of 1983.”

The pastor of that church was Randy Joslin, the current pastor at the Oasis Church in Farmington. Nina said it seemed as if every word the pastor spoke was perfectly timed to what she was going through.

“Randy was practically putting my whole life before me. I could not believe these wonderful words, and how could Mrs. Andrews know that I needed this? … When I went forward to accept Jesus, it was an awesome experience. I was crying, and I felt so much love and peace. Everything that was holding me down was lifted off of me. It was gone, and I felt like I rested. My outlook on life was so different. It was amazing.”

Nina then began to study scripture, and she couldn’t get enough.

“Mrs. Andrews gave me a New Testament Bible and I couldn’t put it down. I started with the book of John, then went on to Matthew, Mark and Luke. Then, I read through it again. I always wanted to know more, and I’m still that way. Everything Randy Joslin was teaching was in those wonderful pages.”

Naomi Andrews and Nina Benally are closer than ever now, having shared life experiences for nearly 50 years. Nina now lives part-time with Naomi while she attends college, and is helping take care of her after she had by-pass heart surgery last fall.

“When I went forward to accept Jesus, it was an awesome experience. I was crying, and I felt so much love and peace. Everything that was holding me down was lifted off of me. It was gone, and I felt like I rested. My outlook on life was so different. It was amazing.”

“Nina is doing real well. She’s a big help to me and checks on me every day,” Naomi said. “And, she’s a 4.0 student. I think that’s just great.”

“She’s my Anglo mom,” Nina added of Naomi. “She’s been my helper all these years, and now I’m able to help her. She knew I was really hurt all those years ago, and she didn’t want me to go through that. It was a great gift.”

Nina is now determined to get her associate’s degree in horticulture studies. Years ago, she attempted to get a Christian education degree from both Northwest College in Kirkland, Washington, and later at the American Indian College in Phoenix. However, family tragedies prevented her from completing the coursework.

“My heart was to teach a child something they didn’t know, something they would know for life,” she said. “My first desire was to teach, and I was able to do that at Navajo Ministries. I had a lot of interruptions when I first tried to get a college degree, but now I’m on track, with God’s help. I look forward to taking what I’m learning back to the community I grew up in,” Nina said.

She added that she’s thankful for the life she’s been given, and the adventures that are yet to come.

“God has put a lot of wonderful people in my life. I have a new life in Christ, and I’m having so much fun.”

Live Navajo Nativity Celebrates Christmas

For the 27th consecutive year, Navajo Ministries hosted its annual Live Navajo Nativity on December 23rd. The event has long become an annual local tradition, reminding everyone of the true reason for the Christmas season.

Mission Team Visits From England

A 13-person mission team from the Thundersley Congregational Church, located near London, England, visited Navajo Ministries in September to learn more about our work and what God has done here since 1953. They visited the Navajo Ministries School, took part in morning devotion time and toured the future Education and Activity Center. They later spent more than a week doing mission work with the Joshua Generation for Jesus Church in Gallup, New Mexico.

Turkeys, Food Donated to Navajo Ministries

Navajo Ministries would like to thank the Four Corners Harley Owners Group for generously donating 22 turkeys and other food items on November 19th. This group has been a valuable annual partner for several years and we truly appreciate the support. Navajo Ministries President Jim Baker and Director of Development Eric Fisher are pictured with the donations at the Four Corners Harley-Davidson store in Farmington.
Meet Kelly Hargrove, New Childcare Program Director

By Kelly Hargrove

My name is Kelly Hargrove and I am extremely excited and honored to be the new Director of Children and Family Services at Navajo Ministries. The children here at the Four Corners Home for Children have captured my heart.

I was fortunate enough to grow up in a strong Christian home in Southern California. My parents became Christians when I was 4 years old and at that point they decided that this was the God that they wanted to serve. I grew up serving in different aspects of ministry, so when God called me into full-time ministry when I was 18, it seemed like the natural path for my life to take.

When I was in high school, God brought an incredible young man into my life. Now, 30 years later, I have been fortunate enough to be married to Pastor Tim Hargrove for the last 25 years. I am so thankful for the life God has called us to take part in each and every day.

Tim and I moved to Farmington, New Mexico in 1987 to serve as youth pastors at Piñon Hills Community Church. We had 3,000 young people come through our Youth Ministry over a period of seven years. In July 1996, God blessed Tim and I with the most amazing, talented and beautiful baby girls. Our twins, Corie and Cadie, are now sophomores in high school. They are the joys of my life.

In October 1998, God called us to Vancouver, British Columbia to start a new church. We spent six years in Vancouver enjoying the diverse people groups and learning about many new cultures. We moved back to Farmington in August 2005 to continue serving at Piñon Hills Community Church.

In February 2010, Diane Hebbard, who was the teacher at Navajo Ministries School, asked me to join her as her assistant. Tim and I have loved the Bakers and Navajo Ministries for many years but working with the children in the school changed the direction God had for my life.

When Annette Hall decided to follow her heart and accept a marriage proposal of a wonderful man that God brought into her life, I was honored to be asked to step into the role of Director of Children and Family Services.

As we look toward the future, I am excited for this new adventure. I have the privilege of loving these beautiful children and helping them to understand that God loves them and has a plan for their lives. By working together we can make a difference in these children’s lives. We can provide safe, loving homes during a time of hurting and difficulty.

In John 21, when Peter is asked to prove his love for our Savior, Jesus tells him to “Feed my Lambs.” That is what we are doing at Navajo Ministries. We are showing Christ’s love by taking care of His precious children.

Kelly Hargrove is Director of Children and Family Services at Navajo Ministries.

Employment Opportunities:

We currently have positions open in our childcare department for FULL-TIME HOUSEPARENTS. If you are interested in joining our team and playing a significant role in the lives of our children, please contact Kelly Hargrove at 505.324.9231 or KHargrove@NavajoMinistries.org
Navajo Ministries Welcomes Back Pat Moone

By Tawnya Vollmert

Navajo Ministries School had a very busy first semester, which was my first semester as the school’s new teacher. As of this writing in late 2011, it’s hard to believe we are almost halfway through the school year already.

We have added more students since school began. Kelly Hargrove, our assistant, also moved on to become Director of Children and Family Services. We are excited to have her in this new leadership role, but the change meant we had to find a new assistant. God took great care of us and provided Mrs. Pat Moone. She has successfully home schooled her own four children, so she knows how to work well with the students.

Pat also has a history with Navajo Ministries. In the past, she worked as an assistant houseparent when they had days off or needed to be out. Pat understands and values the importance of this ministry, and the children we serve. She is a wonderful assistant and she helps us each day with our learning and with taking care of our classroom.

She is a fluent speaker of the Navajo language, so she brings something extra to the class as an answer to prayer. When school began, we didn’t have anyone to help the students learn Navajo language and culture. Today, Pat teaches Navajo language and culture lessons each week. The students have been enjoying these lessons and are learning Navajo vocabulary and practicing their memory verses in Navajo, as well as in English.

The students greet us using their traditional language, and we say the pledge in English and Navajo. The children also have been able to learn some traditional ways from Navajo culture. They even made tiny rug weavings for our Christmas tree for the Festival of Trees, a benefit event for another local non-profit held each Christmas season in Farmington.

Everyone also had a great time learning the traditional way of making bread. Watching the children stir the dough with their hands and gently shape it was a lot of fun. Each piece of bread turned out tender and delicious! Pat has been a wonderful addition to our classroom and we thank God for sending her our way.

We are looking forward to the start of the second semester and continuing our learning. We pray that we will continue to work well at all we do, with all of our heart, as unto God.

Tawnya Vollmert is the full-time teacher at the Navajo Ministries School.
The young adults and children growing up since the early 1970s act a bit differently. Part of this reason is growing up with all the technology available to them. It just gets more and more available every year, and with it comes a whole new set of problems.

Psychiatrists and therapists all over our country are sounding the alarm to parents and teachers. The big message: MONITOR AND SET TECHNOLOGICAL LIMITS FOR OUR KIDS. Why? Researchers are now saying that all this fast-paced technology is changing the way their brains operate, and not for the better.

Researchers are finding evidence that the firing or lack of firing of neurotransmitters in the brain brought on by technological interaction is capable of creating symptomology of ADHD, depression, anxiety, and more. Because we cannot keep children focused in the classroom, we are now implementing more technology in our grade school classrooms. This does not appear to be the answer.

Did you ever notice how Generation X people and those younger interact? It’s not the way us older folks do. Their idea of a good time is texting, sexting, video games, watching movies, playing Nintendo, X Box, etc. What happened to sitting around and talking? Is it too boring for them because their brains can’t relax long enough to pull it off? Now you might understand some of your frustration in communicating with the younger generation.

Spread the word and let’s stop this phenomenon before it gets out of hand. Parents, limit technological exposure to one hour a day (remember they are getting some at school). Don’t allow your kids to have their cell phones with them 24 hours a day, seven days a week. It’s all about limits, limits, limits. The future is at stake.

Christmas Connections Reaches Those in Need

The annual Christmas Connections event has served thousands of needy Navajo families in remote areas of the Navajo Nation for years. In December 2011, more than 300 Navajo families were given Bibles, blankets, toys, coats, food and more throughout the massive Navajo Nation. Many of the families helped this year were located in eastern Arizona.

Navajo Ministries, located in Farmington, New Mexico, is the item collection location point for a dozen Navajo pastors, who pick up the gifts and food just before Christmas and then deliver them to people who likely would not get much, if anything, during the Christmas season.

These pastors, who travel hundreds of miles to make the deliveries, also share the Gospel message and connect with people about the true reason for the season. We are so thankful for everyone who is involved in this annual outreach effort, from the people who make material and monetary donations, to the volunteers who put together the gift packages for delivery.

Christmas Connections continues to show God’s love through His people. It is always our sincere pleasure to be a part of this wonderful ministry program.

NAVAJO NEIGHBORS 13
Here in the Four Corners we are blessed with four seasons, and as the season turns cold, I am continually blessed to see that low temperatures do nothing to dampen the warm, giving hearts of the community.

We were excited to again partner with the Blue Star Mothers Four Corners Chapter, along with Four Corners Community Bank, to Remember Our Veterans and Support Our Troops. During the month of November, we asked community members to donate items that could be included in care packages to be sent to members of the armed forces stationed around the world. Once again, the community came through in a big way.

We punctuated the collection drive with a 12-hour live broadcast from the Farmington Museum. We had the pleasure of receiving a call during our broadcast from Lyle Yazzie, who is currently serving in the U.S. Army in Afghanistan. He wanted all of our listeners to know how much the troops appreciate the care packages, which include a taste of home.

By 7 p.m. on Veteran’s Day, the drive had already been a success and donations continued coming in for the rest of the month. The Blue Star Mothers met their goal of packages sent, and even had an excess of items to be included in future care packages.

We can’t thank our community enough and want to thank the men and women serving our country as well.

On a personal note, October marked my first full year here at Vertical Radio. I am so excited, as is our staff, to continue in 2012 trusting God to grow and prosper the station by reaching people with “More than Music.”

Relationships Provide Remembrances

This past fall it was a joy for us to visit some of our faithful supporters in the Mid-Atlantic area of our country. Two of those dear friends were Josef and Olga Kripner. These folks have been supporting this ministry for a long time. I was impressed with their thorough knowledge of the activities going on at Navajo Ministries. It was evident that they took the time to read the newsletters and Navajo Neighbors magazines that arrived in their mailbox throughout the year.

The Kripners have sponsored over a dozen different children over the past few decades. It was good to give them an update on some of these youngsters who are now living productive lives in various parts of the country. We also had prayer with them before leaving. Olga had been in failing health in recent months. Not long after we returned from our trip, I received a call from Josef saying that his dear wife had passed away in her sleep. They had been married 62 years.

While our hearts ache when our loved ones depart, it is a comfort to realize that they are now with their Lord and Savior in heaven. The pains of this earth are gone. A new life has begun. Our prayers go out to the families that have lost loved ones in recent months and years. May these words from Psalm 116:15 bring comfort to you today: “Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.”

We are thankful for our friends who have recently remembered their departed loved ones with a Living Memorial gift. Some have honored the lives of those still living, too. These gifts are used to provide for the needs of the children living at the Four Corners Home for Children here at Navajo Ministries.

If you would like to remember your loved one in this way, please fill out the envelope in the middle of this magazine to indicate your wishes. An attractive card will be sent to the family of the one being remembered. No amounts are mentioned and all gifts are tax-deductible and will be receipted.

Thank you for your concern and support of the children in our care.

Jim Baker, President
